

The Buddha's helper is a kind being named Guan Yin. She responds to everyone who needs help and calls her name. She especially likes to help young people when they are facing challenges such as fear, anger, death, bullying, sickness, and nightmares. She appears in different ways with a variety of names in many countries all over the world.

Exquisite illustrations spark children's imagination to perceive the compassionate nature of Guan Yin, as well as their own innate potential to be calm, peaceful, and caring.
